The home should be a place where we can

As cities grow, the environmental problems become increasingly visible. Poorly managed cities and towns also generate polluting industries and unacceptable patterns of consumption. They produce unmanageable waste which harms the land, water and the atmosphere. Keeping environment healthy in the cities of the twenty-first century has become a major challenge for city planners and managers.