Title	Research services for informal settlement surveying
Duration	2 months
Project Location	Yangon, Myanmar
Type of contract	Request for Proposal
Deadline to Apply	23 January 2019

1. Background

UN-Habitat, the United Nations Human Settlements Programme, has had a presence in Myanmar since the early 1990s. UN-Habitat is dedicated to promoting socially and environmentally sustainable development of human settlements in an urbanizing world, with the goal of providing safer and inclusive human settlements.

Yangon Regional Government (YRG), under the leadership of the Chief Minister has prioritized the need to find a durable solution for households living in informal settlements – particularly those located in the ‘resettlement areas’ in Yangon’s northwest. The resettlement areas or ‘new towns’ are those areas where plots were distributed in the 1960s and 1980s/1990s to resettled squatters, government officials or as a sites-and-services scheme. Informal settlements – often referred to as ‘squatters’ where residential housing does not have formal legal permission and land has been occupied and development is unplanned by owner/occupier. The households living in informal settlements for the most part do not have tenure security.

YRG has had stated they will pursue a dual track policy of upgrading resettlement areas and relocating households in informal settlements to satellite towns that are now being planned. UN-Habitat has had numerous discussions with YRG on solutions and ways forward - urging YRG to restrict resettlement to those households living in hazardous areas that are unsuitable for human settlement development. In addition, any resettlement should be voluntary and not forced.

On this basis, UN- Habitat is working with YRG/YCDC to develop the Yangon Informal Settlements – Resettlement Programme (YISRP). The programme is broken into two phases – inception phase and implementation phase. During the inception phase the following issues and others will be examined in detail:

- i. options for mixed use/mixed income development
- ii. housing financing option for the poorest

- iii. identification of targeted settlements for resettlement
- iv. type of housing options (incremental, rental, mixed- use)
- v. affordability or ability to pay for housing
- vi. Willingness of population to upgrade and/or relocate

UN-Habitat is providing technical leadership in the inception phase. This includes carrying out a number of studies and assessments, scoping study on land suitability, costing and modeling and consultation with communities – all of which will inform the implementation phase of the resettlement programme. Specifically, more information is required on the potential resettlement risks to ensure these are mitigated and social, environmental and economic safeguards are in place in accordance with the international standards following international principles and practices. Affordability levels must be assessed and a process for engaging with communities to involve them in a participatory planning process is vital.

Five areas of technical assistance have been identified and TOR is specifically addressing items 4 and 5 in the graphic below:

Research undertaken during the inception phase will build on findings from UN-Habitat’s mapping assessment conducted in cooperation with YCDC that identified/verified 423 slum/informal settlements within municipal boundaries. The slum mapping classified informal settlements into seven typologies based on their location and/or development and qualitative socio-economic research on urban poverty and living conditions in Yangon’s informal settlements.¹

¹ UN-Habitat has compiled a comprehensive database of all informal settlements in the city, and mapped the city’s resettlement areas. See Mapping Yangon: The Untapped Communities Phase One, UN-Habitat, (2016). GRET conducted a study on informal settlements. See Volume 1: Final report Research Services for Informal Settlement Surveying, Yangon, June 2017)

Based on the findings, approximately 370,00 people (7% of Yangon’s population live in informal settlements. Hlaining Thar Yar has the highest number of informal settlements (181). An estimated 293 settlements are located in disaster prone areas such as river banks, drainage ways, railway tracks, road right of way, and creeks. Of the 293 settlements located in areas unsuitable for development – one third (approximately 100) are extremely vulnerable to flooding and cyclones.

Table 1: Informal settlements in Yangon

Classification of settlements	Number of settlements	Total land area (acres)	Population
Slum settlements	131	953	167,925
River/creek settlements	side 79	358.21	80,810
Roadside settlements	147	220.91	58,495
Village tracts	27	129.91	33,300
Resettlement area subdivisions	18	37.66	12,160
Peri-urban subdivisions	land 8	112.66	8,550
Inner urban infill	13	10.15	3,075
Total	423	1,822.5	364,315

Despite these treacherous conditions, the GRET survey conducted under the UN-Habitat auspices found that over 90% of households survey did not want to move. The research conducted under this TOR will also generate much needed data and information required for all stakeholders to plan and invest in the low-income communities.

2. Research Objectives

The broader research goal is to support the evidence-based design/implementation of a resettlement programme that is properly planned and adequately financed as well as voluntary and affordable for the targeted population.

The proposed research has three broad objectives:

- i. to address information and data gaps on how each settlement developed (categories), levels of investment in infrastructure and housing in targeted informal settlements and demographic information on urban households in Hlaingtharyar;
- ii. to identify levels/types of community organization and provide insight into community views on resettlement, identify resettlement risks and solutions for mitigating these risks
- iii. to determine levels of affordability in resettlement vis a vis different segments of the targeted population

The survey and research is comprised of four areas of enquiry:

- Geographical – vulnerability/hazard mapping of informal settlements and prioritization settlements and households for resettlement based on findings

- Social – community characteristics and concerns surrounding resettlement including willingness to move
- Demographic –survey of households in targeted settlements with key demographic information related to resettlement
- Economic – sustainable livelihoods assessment of households in targeted settlements to establish affordability thresholds and to provide insights about livelihood options in case of resettlements. Recommendations for Community Economic Development Planning in new settlements

UN-Habitat is seeking to engage a survey/ research firm to develop quantitative and qualitative research methodologies around these four areas in collaboration with project staff, undertake the survey research based on the parameters described in the TOR. The consultancy will be undertaken in two stages. Stage 1 will be dedicated to develop questionnaire, methodology and for the carrying out qualitative and quantitative research and stage 2 for reporting- which will overlap with stage 1 work.

Proposed Research Methodology:

Proposed research will be conducted in the informal settlements and slum of the Haling Tharyar township o Yangon. This research will include conducting survey for both qualitative and qualitative research through household survey for a sample decided in consultation with UN-Habitat.

Priority will be given to those settlements which have high vulnerability to climate extreme events and disaster and absence of tenure security with remote possibility of regularization and providing any kind of tenure security. Random sampling survey may be more appropriate to choose. This research should also be supported by desk review of the existing studies. Research/ survey firm need to review the existing studies/ research in the area.

Informal settlements in Hlaing Thayar shall be ranked and prioritized for survey on the basis of a set vulnerability criteria, that requires settlements to relocate. The selection of settlements shall be based on desk review of existing maps, google images and information of the open source followed by rapid field assessments.

Haling Tharyar Township has 181 informal settlements with approximately 24,865 households and 124,325 population size. The prioritization of settlements shall identify 20 settlements which fall on priority settlements from vulnerability lenses. It is suggested to pick a representative number of households commensurate to the size of the each of the 20 selected settlements. Statistically sample size for the survey should have at least 95% confidence level with maximum 5% margin of error that means; for 24,865 household, sample size should be at least 500 to keep the margin of error below 5% with 95% confidence level. Number of household in any settlement should not be more than 10% of total households. Number of sample size for selected settlements are to be agreed with UN-Habitat prior to the commencement of survey.

3. Description of Duties

Stage 1

Under the supervision of the Country Programme Manager, the Research Team based in Yangon, Myanmar will work in a dedicated manner for the assigned period. Working with the Country Programme Manager and other project team members, the research team will be responsible for the following:

- Review of applicable secondary sources on informal settlements, their location map and socio-economic survey report, studies on urban poverty, information on the ‘resettlement areas’ and government sponsored resettlements in Yangon of the past.
 - Familiarization with informal settlements in Hlaingtharyar;
 - Development of quantitative and qualitative methodologies for undertaking rapid socioeconomic survey research in urban informal settlements as defined in the TOR
 - Conduct the research
- Settlement Selection and Prioritization: determine vulnerability and prioritization

Based on the categories of settlements identified under ‘Mapping Yangon’, the research will focus on those settlements with low levels of tenure security and high levels of risk due to hazards such as tidal flooding and cyclone. These settlements will be ranked in order of priority taking into account levels of investment in infrastructure and housing. Based on the findings, the settlements that will be included in the other research areas of enquiry will be identified in close consultation with UN-Habitat.

UN-Habitat will make spatial data available to the survey team. Remote sensing outputs will be available to facilitate the research – particularly during the first stage. UN Habitat will support the research with basic GIS maps available from its “Mapping Yangon” project.

The data and analysis of the survey team and its reports will be interpreted by UN-Habitat team and is not expected of the research team.

Following information will be gathered from the 20 priority settlements requiring resettlement to a new location.

- Population/Households: demographic survey of households in targeted communities including household composition, gender, head of household, age, # of children, disabilities and elderly.
- Community Resettlement Risks: develop methods for generating qualitative information and analysis on resettlement risks faced by communities
 - history of settlement

- tenure security/ types of ownership²
 - investment in housing/infrastructure and DRR measures already in place
 - community willingness to move
 - levels of community cohesion, community organizations/associations, role of CSOs/CBOs and other entities (religious) in community development
 - types and degree of resettlement risks faced by households (related to resettlement not hazards) and key areas for strengthening cohesion and interventions in programme design to mitigate risks
- Sustainable Livelihoods: Sustainable Livelihoods Assessment (SLA) for selected households from each of the target settlements (in 20 priority settlements with the sample sized explained earlier.)
- analysis on how livelihoods are developed and how various types of livelihood assets are used to build sustainable livelihoods (human, financial, physical, natural, social) and the shocks and threats faced by households
 - based on findings identify key issues that must be addressed in a resettlement to reduce shock to households' livelihoods (example importance of micro-finance, housing finance, commercial/market enterprises, types/characteristics of housing, etc.)
 - assess levels of 'transitional poverty' by provide analysis into the depth and severity of poverty (e.g. what percentage of households are clustered near the poverty line')³
 - levels of indebtedness
 - Ensuring access to public assets and services and managing this transition is therefore critical and has the potential to make a dramatic and lasting impact.⁴
 - Analyze importance of gender in livelihoods and female –headed households

Outputs / Deliverables

- Priority Ranking of the settlements – through a vulnerability assessment criteria
- Research methodology - to be discussed and agreed with the UN Habitat team, including a qualitative research survey instrument, questionnaire, and outline of the quantitative approach to be employed and areas of investigation

² Land options may vary from settlement to settlement depending on the primary tenure status on the land – either public land or land owned privately (by individuals, institutions or customary-owned land.) In the case of public/government owned land, options might include the following: i) provision of land for free with title (collective or individual), ii) land provided for free with long-term user rights (often as a contribution by governments and municipal agencies), or iii) land provided for long-term lease for a nominal fee (individual or collective). In other cases, households have purchased land (most likely transaction is unregistered), or land is privately owned but could be leased or sold or in some cases could be provided for free.

³ The global poverty line set by the World Bank is USD 1.90 per person per day but more than 40 percent of households surveyed were trying to survive on less than USD 0.86 (1,000 Kyat)

⁴ 'Transitional poverty' is tied in part to the increases in the cost of living and reliance on the informal sector (casual and unskilled jobs) as a source of employment. See report on poverty in Yangon Region by Save the Children, 'Lives on Loan: Extreme Poverty in Yangon' (October 2016), page 23

- A synthesis of the findings both qualitative and quantitative in the form of a study
- Raw data from the quantitative phase of the research, provided as data files
- Data in an aggregated form to be determined in consultation with the programme team.

Stage 2

Reporting

The final report will present the findings of qualitative and quantitative research across four areas of enquiry as follows:

- Prioritization of settlements based on criteria/classification
- Population data (provided in the annex) but summarized in the report
- Community- level analysis of resettlement risks and related issues (willingness to move, issues of concern in resettlement, mitigation of resettlement risks)
- Case studies of selected households for SLA summarized with findings in annex
- Conclusions and recommendations

Qualifications

The successful proposal will have knowledge and experience in the field of survey, assessments on urban poverty in the Southeast Asian region, and an understanding of informal settlements, urban development, factors in resettlement and sustainable livelihoods.
